

Learning Materials/Modules

A learning module is an organized collection of content presented together. It's a tool where items such as files, folders and tools are added.

Your instructor decides whether to enforce a sequential path through the content in a learning module or allow you to open pages in any order.

Following a Sequential Path

Navigating within Learning Modules

The screenshot shows a web page for a learning module. At the top right, there is a navigation bar with the text "Page 1 of 3" and a right-pointing arrow. The main content area has a header with a large number "1" and the title "Cross-Cultural Psychology" in a serif font. Below the title is the subtitle "Why study culture from a psychological perspective?" in a smaller, italicized serif font. The background of the header features a photograph of two young girls. Below the header is a section titled "Introduction" in a small, bold, sans-serif font. Underneath "Introduction" is a large heading "Welcome!" in a bold, sans-serif font. The main content is split into two columns. The left column has a light blue background and contains the text: "If you were born somewhere else, would you be the same person you are today? Would you have a few different traditions, maybe celebrate a few different holidays, but still have, basically, the same set of beliefs, attitudes and values?". The right column has a light yellow background and contains the text: "the past 30 years, psychologists have begun to acknowledge the limitations in their previous assumptions that research conducted in North America would apply globally by examining the similarities and differences in human behaviour across societies." At the bottom of the right column is the heading "Overview" in a bold, sans-serif font.

Using the Table of Contents

The table of contents displays next to the course menu on the page. You can move the table of contents below the learning module content area to make more space across the page.

There are three display options available on the header of the table of contents:

- Minimize
- Maximize
- Move to the bottom or the left

How to Move the Table of Contents

Click the button (☰) to move the table of contents to the bottom of the page to the left, click the left-facing arrow (←) to move the table of contents back.
